WHITE OUT

Interior designer Jeffrey Bilhuber, whose new book, American Master ($65, Rizzoli)—which distills 30 years of design expertise, was compiled with editor and writer Sarah Ruffin Costello and features a foreword by Mariska Hargitay—curates a selection of neutrals and whites for the upscale abode.

1. "The rock crystal Orbit chandeliers from Mathieu Lustrerie make chandeliers look modern, at long last." Price upon request, 43 E. 10th St., mathieulustrerie.com

2. "The shape and form of this sculptural lacquered bench by Amanda Levet & Future Systems are very similar to some of architect Zaha Hadid's triumphant early works and current commissions." Price upon request, Dienst + Dotter Antikviteter, 411 Lafayette St., dienstanddotter.com

3. "I'm fascinated by the swirling vortex of forms in this lamp. It's like looking into the eye of a storm and finding only beautiful objects in movement." Gesseed steel seaweed lamp, $25,000 for the pair, by Alexander von Eikh at Gerald Bland, 232 E. 59th St., 6th Fl., geraldblandinc.com

4. "Philip Arctander's Clam chairs are experiencing a huge surge in interest. These circa-1945 chairs are modern, comfortable, timeless and classic, and the shape is just plain sexy. When was the last time you heard that about a chair?" Price upon request, Dienst + Dotter Antikviteter

5. "Achille Salvagni has an innate ability to meld architecture and interior design into the concept, form and materials of his furniture and lighting. The Shield Noir Doré marble cabinet with polished aluminum doors and gilt bronze feet possesses a brutalistic beauty that feels very current." $78,000, Maison Gerard, 43 E. 10th St., maisongerard.com
